

May 15, 2013

A Dreamy $4.75 Million South Beach Condo (House of the Day)

By AOL Real Estate Editors

Zilbert International Realty

Real estate is depressing in a number of ways. One, homes can be depressingly bad, ugly or cramped. (Please refer to our post on the worst listings in America). Two, they can be depressingly, heartbreakingly, unattainably, "I-could-never-afford-this-home" luxurious. And by that, we mean this home in particular.

Priced at $4.75 million, this gorgeous 3,000-square-foot condo in Miami's South Beach is the kind of home we have dreams about. It's decked out in white glass tiles, boasts recessed color-changing lights (this is South Beach, after all), minimalist Asian-inspired decor and views over Miami Beach and downtown Miami. Sure, it's not everyone's cup of tea -- it probably won't appeal to you if you're more inclined to the outdoorsy, ranch-style way of living (in that case, we like this home) -- but if you're all about that luxe life, then this is probably the home for you. (Or your dreams, anyway.)

Check it out in the gallery below.

Mark Zilbert of Zilbert International Realty has the listing.

See This $4.75 Million South Beach Home With a View

